Words from our Senior Minister

Why This Church?

Adam Hamilton is a United Methodist pastor and author who lives in Kansas City. He speculates that for any church to thrive and grow, its members must be able to answer the question, "Why this church?" Being able to articulate, that gives a community of faith clarity of its mission and vision. So, for us, we must be able to answer the question, "Why University Christian Church?" Why this congregation and not one of the many others in this area?

For me, this is why this is my church home and why I feel called to serve this church.

History

It may seem strange to begin with history, but our shared history is powerful. An important part of our DNA, is our connection with TCU. In our early days our Sunday services, attended by the whole community, were held in the college chapel led by college President Addison Clark. This "university church," where "town and gown" worshipped together, grew from its 60 charter members to become one of the largest and most visible local congregations affiliated with The Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). We are shaped by our academic heritage, which encourages a spirit of openness and freedom of thought.

To innovate with any integrity, a church must sit on a solid foundation, and this community of faith has had and continues to have a powerful witness in our community and the world. Since 1873, this congregation has been open to the spirit of God moving among us and shaping us into who God would have us become.

Inclusivity

This is a congregation that believes strongly, passionately that all are welcome in the family of God. We boldly claim that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is good news for all people. And when we say that, we know that "all means all" or it means nothing. Men and women, blacks and whites, gay and straight, Native Americans and immigrants, progressives and conservatives, Democrats and Republicans, and even bald white guys, are all invited to the table of Jesus Christ—or no one is. This diversity of background and thought makes things difficult at times, but it is also part of what makes us beautiful.

Witness to the Community and the World

I carry with me an image of the church as a filling station, where people are filled and sent out into the world to make a difference. In many ways, that is what we are about. We strive to make the world more peaceful and just as we do great work in the community and the world. From our incredible efforts of the Children's Closet to our relationship with Rosemont Elementary, to our service and learning trips, to Room in the Inn, to our support for Disciples Mission Fund and the Week of Compassion and so much more—we are making a difference. I also love the stories of what our people are doing day to day, in your own lives, to make a difference.

Commitment to All Generations

It is a gift to be a multi-generation congregation. It is becoming rarer to see a church reflects a healthy population of people in each generation. We work really hard to achieve that. Our youth and children's ministries are providing a nurturing, loving environment for the younger generation to grow in faith. We are also taking steps and seeing progress in making this a church that the millennial generation will not only feel comfortable and challenged to be a part of, but one where they will be eager to invite others. And we are taking significant steps to serve and nurture our senior adults in very intentional ways.

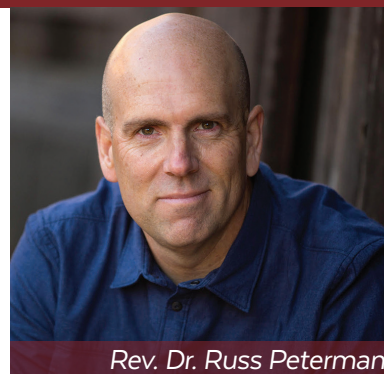

People

I can think of hundreds of stories to tell about our people, about you. You are a grace-filled people who seek to be inclusive, challenged, and loving of one another. Your journeys are diverse, just as your sorrows and joys are diverse. Each and every week, as I look out at our congregation, I am reminded of how incredible you are. You are a beacon of hope in this world, each and every one of you embodies the love and grace of God for me.

What about you? How would you respond to the question, "Why this church?" In the next few months we'll be inviting some of you to share publicly why you choose to make this your community of faith. I look forward to hearing what you have to say.

Grace and peace,

Rev. Dr. Russ Peterman, Senior Minister

Rev. Dr. Russ Peterman

How to connect and get involved at UCC

On the previous page, Russ, makes some great points about his personal answer to "Why this church?" All his points are a part of the DNA of University Christian Church. The question Russ is asking is an important part of understanding who we are, what we do and who we want to be.

Having the ability to clearly define these answers plants the seed in a healthy and nurturing environment to organically grow beyond what we could imagine. If each person in our church, clearly understood their "Why this church?" and supported that through all their actions—the energy, love, openness and spirit of God would be felt by all those who come in contact with us—they would want to be a part of that, to feel and experience that. Our light would shine so bright, empowering us, collectively, to do unfathomably great things.

Think about it—how do we get the word out and act out the good, we as a church, want to instill and manifest throughout our community and beyond if we don't start sharing our "Why UCC?".

How does this tie into getting connected and involved at UCC? Simply knowing your "Why this church" will help you personally define and live into being involved at UCC. It will provide a clear understanding of what is important to you and how that ties to being a part of UCC, making you feel more connected than ever.

KIDS HOPE USA

Month of February

Due to larger school class sizes and smaller budgets, giving individual attention to students is growing harder each year. UCC partners with Rosemont Elementary to support educators and mentor students. Mentors meet weekly with students for an hour (-ish) at the school, during school hours. By partnering mentors with at-risk elementary students, Kids Hope USA builds life-changing relationships one at a time: One Child. One Hour. One School. One Church. If you are interested in serving as a mentor, contact Mike Wager.
